Biography, Exhibitions, Bibliography

Biography

Park Eun Sun was born in Mokpo, a port city in southern South Korea, in 1965. He grew up in a country still marked by the aftermath of the war and post-war economic hardship. From a young age, he showed a natural talent for drawing and painting, standing out at school for his artistic ability and his constant desire to become an artist.

Despite initial resistance from his family, Park managed to continue his studies, thanks in part to the support of a teacher who recognised his talent. After a break caused by financial difficulties and military service, he resumed his university studies in Seoul, where he discovered sculpture and chose to devote himself wholeheartedly to this discipline.

During his formative years, two figures proved decisive: Professors Inkyum Kim and Youngwon Kim, who introduced him to abstract and figurative art respectively. Park gradually developed a penchant for abstraction, identifying non-representational sculpture as the most authentic way to develop a personal artistic language. During this period, he met Kyung Hee, initially one of his students, who would become his life partner and a vital source of support throughout his career. After their marriage in 1993, the couple decided to move to Italy, drawn by the country's sculptural tradition and the opportunity to work directly with Carrara marble.

On arriving in Tuscany, Park faced several difficult years of adjustment and exploration. After an initial creative block, he realised that his artistic identity could not be separated from the experiences he had gained in Korea. He began to develop his own artistic language with greater awareness. Natural stone, particularly marble, became the focus of his practice: a material chosen for its strength, its purity and its potential to be transformed through a process of subtraction and fracture.

In 1994, the family settled in Pietrasanta, where Park put down roots and began his professional career. The Asian financial crisis of the second half of the 1990s hit the family hard, forcing him through a period of extreme hardship and temporary separation from his wife and son, who had returned to Korea. It was during those years, however, that his work began to attract attention. In Seoul, the Park Ryu Sook Gallery recognised the strength of his artistic exploration and offered him an exhibition, marking one of his first major international successes.

The early 2000s marked a decisive turning point. Leading Italian collectors began to support his work and in 2001 he meets the Milanese gallery owner Nicola Loi. This marked the start of a long-standing collaboration that saw his sculptures exhibited in various Italian cities, including Turin, Milan, Alba, Rome and Florence. This helped to raise his profile amongst European collectors.

In 2007, Pietrasanta dedicated a major solo exhibition to him at the Parco della Versiliana, strengthening the strong bond between the artist and the 'Little Athens' of contemporary sculpture. In the years that followed, institutional recognition grew, culminating in 2020, when the city conferred honorary citizenship on him, placing him alongside prominent figures such as Fernando Botero and Igor Mitoraj. In 2020, he also began being represented by the Galleria d'Arte Contini, leading to exhibitions in museums, institutions, and international venues, including: Palazzo Litta in Milan; Piazza Duomo in Pietrasanta; the Colosseum Archaeological Park in Rome; and the City of Arts and Sciences in Valencia.

In 2027, the Infinito Museum, designed by architect Mario Botta and dedicated to the Korean artist, will open in the County of Sinan, South Korea.

Park Eun Sun's work is positioned within an ongoing dialogue between East and West: deeply rooted in Korean discipline and mindset, yet developed within the Italian marble-carving tradition. His sculptures, often crafted from two-tone marbles, are characterised by broken columns, fissures and fractures that become both poetic and structural elements. The act of 'breaking', central to his artistic practice, transforms the wound in the material into a space of light and breath.

In recent years, Park has expanded his experimentation further, creating columns composed of hollowed-out marble spheres illuminated from within. He has also created bronze works and paintings that reflect the same gestural quality typical of his sculptures through the medium of paint. This has made his body of work more varied whilst maintaining its formal coherence.

Today, Park Eun Sun lives and works in Pietrasanta, where he continues his exploration of material, void and light, engaging with a material as ancient as marble to express a contemporary and universal vision of sculpture.
